

MEMORANDUM FOR: THE RECORD

I spoke to Charlie Waterman about the draft NSDD on Economic Decisions for Libya, and he advised me that the DCI had opted for the language in paragraph 4a of the draft NSDD. Waterman then called the NSC and informed them of the Director's decision.

NSDD

ECONOMIC DECISIONS FOR LIBYA

After consultation with the National Security Council and in accordance with applicable law, I have decided on the following steps to reduce the threat posed by Libyan policies and actions.

1. To prohibit the import into the United States of crude oil from Libya.
2. To require validated licenses for all exports of U.S. goods and technology to Libya, except for medicine, medical supplies, and agricultural commodities.
3. The general policy of the U.S. shall be to deny licenses for export to Libya of
 - a. Goods and technology controlled for national security purposes, and
 - b. Oil and gas technology and equipment not readily available from sources outside the US.

For all other newly controlled exports of goods and technology, there is no presumption of denial.

4a. To the extent feasible, the administrative steps taken to implement these decisions shall be designed to minimize the extraterritorial impact of new export controls, bearing in mind the basic purposes of these restrictions. In particular, the U.S. will follow a flexible policy where third country companies are involved. Reexport of goods and technical data already outside of the United States at the time the new controls are imposed will not be precluded under these controls; foreign products derived from U.S. technical data will not be affected by the new controls. The United States will be prepared to show some flexibility with respect to the licensing of items generally to be prohibited from export or reexport under the new controls, where the items are required to fulfill preexisting contracts or are components representing a minor percentage of products to be produced abroad.

4b. These actions only apply to exports from the U.S. and reexports of U.S.-origin goods and technologies. Foreign products derived from U.S. technical data will not be affected by the new controls. The new controls will not affect pre-existing binding contracts. Requests to reexport foreign commodities incorporating U.S.-origin components will be decided on a case-by-case basis under regulations to be issued by the Secretary of Commerce. Reexport of goods and technical data already outside of the United States at the time the new controls are imposed will not be precluded under these controls.

5. These decisions shall not preclude the export of items for which validated licenses have previously been issued or for which binding preexisting contracts have been signed.

6. In light of these decisions, the Secretary of Defense, the Director of Central Intelligence, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, shall revalidate contingency planning regarding possible Libyan reactions and Soviet moves.

7. The Secretary of State and the Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs shall continue to co-chair a Task Force on Libya to coordinate, to implement, and to recommend additional options as necessary.
